County Permit Inspections Can Now Be Tracked Online

FAYETTEVILLE – Beginning today, Cumberland County residents can track the status of permit inspections online.

By going to the County government website, (www.co.cumberland.nc.us) and clicking on Inspections Search under the heading Planning Information, a builder or homeowner can learn when the most recent inspection was completed and if any violations are noted by the inspector.

This is expected to be a welcome enhancement to the county's website and online capabilities for builders and property owners alike.

To view the most recently entered inspection result, the permit holder may enter the permit number directly into the block provided, or select the permit type, the year the permit was issued, and then select the permit number from the drop-down box.

More than 6,000 permits were issued by the County in 2008, with more than 17,000 inspections performed.
