“We promise even more fun and learning than ever before,” said Angela Shaver, Extension Agent for 4-H Development. “This year will have all new activities including a day of kitchen chemistry, a visit to the Life Sciences Museum, a section on medical technology, and aerospace science.”

The cost is $75 and includes transportation, admission costs, snacks, drinks, lunch and supplies. Space is limited to 10 youth on a first-come, first-served basis.
